Dear Colleagues:

We are pleased to proclaim February 4 to 10, 2024, International Development Week, encouraging reflection on the various forms of equity and inequity in our own schools and communities, and around the world.

This proclamation highlights the relationships between organizations, including the Manitoba Council for International Cooperation and other community leaders working to address social, political, and environmental inequalities from the local to global scale. It also aims to inspire Canadians, especially youth, to start investigating the origins of these inequities, the initiatives underway to alleviate their effects, and how they can contribute to these efforts. Sustainable Foundations: A Guide for Teaching the Sustainable Development Goals and many other resources can be found at www.mcic.ca.

Observing International Development Week in Manitoba provides students, educators, parents/caregivers, and communities with the opportunity to learn more about the Sustainable Development Goals identified in the United Nations Agenda 2030, and to inspire each other to Go for the Goals, this year's International Development Week theme.

We would like to thank Manitoba Council for International Cooperation for taking steps to build a more equitable and just world.

Sincerely,
